- Innovation
 - Innovation gives us a competitive advantage. We promote collaboration and sharing of ideas across our business. We have a structured approach to recognizing innovations, thoroughly testing ideas, and sharing learnings.
- Competence
 - All our employees are highly competent within their specialist fields. We encourage personal and professional development and see it as a key part of improving our competence level as an organization.
- Honesty
 - We are always honest and open with our clients. We set realistic targets and goals, and respect their right to confidentiality. We work closely with them at all times, strengthening relationships to achieve optimal results.
- Trust
 - We make a great effort to ensure that those we work with, both internally and externally, comply with strict ethical guidelines related to finance, operating conditions, and environmental issues.

2 Introduction to the Code of Conduct

This Code of Conduct sets out binding standards for all individuals employed globally in NFM Group or any of its subsidiaries (referred to as the NFM Group) while carrying out their job responsibilities for the company and when representing the company in front of its external stakeholders. In addition, the standards described in this document apply to all individuals representing the company's interests to clients, suppliers, or subcontractors, regardless of employment.

This Code of Conduct should also be treated as the company's commitment to following principles, standards, and requirements every time ethics-related issues appear in the company's activity and the activities of company representatives. Following the rules in the Code of Conduct means being sure that what you follow both the law and the guidelines explained in this document. Any doubt regarding the compliance of actions taken with the binding legal terms and/or the terms of the Code of Conduct needs to be openly discussed with a direct superior, and should that be impossible, with the CEO in the NFM Group, alternatively the Chairman of the Board in NFM Group.

To fulfil our mission, the NFM Group wishes to be recognized for high ethical standards in the business. We aim to be a trustworthy partner for working with outside partners and a place where employees are satisfied with the company's standards and principles.

Following the guidelines of the Code of Conduct and the fundamental values of NFM Group, i.e., innovation, competency, honesty, and trust, will help ensure our company's internal cohesion and good reputation as well as the willingness of customers, suppliers, subcontractors, and other contractors to collaborate with us

3 Standards of ethical conduct and social accountability

NFM Conduct operates in a manner that ensures the trust of all external stakeholders of the company

The NFM Group's Code of Conduct requires all employees and company representatives to deal with external stakeholders (customers, suppliers, subcontractors, and others) in a manner that raises no doubts about the ethical aspect of collaboration and compliance with the law applicable in each stakeholder's country.

3.1 Customers

The NFM Group treats all its customers fairly and without any bias. The main goal of the company is to offer customers products that completely meet their needs, following all guidelines for fair and ethical business practices.

3.2 Suppliers and subcontractors

Suppliers and subcontractors play a big part in the value of NFM Group products, and they greatly affect customer satisfaction. We choose suppliers and subcontractors based on a fair assessment of their reliability and integrity, considering both short-term and long-term needs and goals. In our supplier selection process, we carefully evaluate multiple factors to ensure that our choices align with our values and business objectives. Our considerations encompass not only the cost, quality, and delivery time but also extend to the principles of ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance). Specifically, we are committed to continuously develop to assess suppliers based on their adherence to social, environmental, and ethical standards. This comprehensive approach reflects our dedication to responsible and sustainable business practices.

Contractors and subcontractors are required to adhere to regulations that incorporate, at a minimum, the fundamental labour standards of the International Labour Organization (ILO) as implemented in national law.¹ The regulations of the country where the contractor or their subcontractors operate during the execution of the order are crucial. If the country has not ratified one or more core labour standards or has not incorporated them into national law, contractors and subcontractors are still obligated to adhere to the applicable core labour standards.

We are careful not to rely too much on any single supplier or subcontractor, and we work to create dependable alternatives to ensure reliability. The NFM Group actively avoids conflicts of interest and any appearance of bias in all situations.

The NFM Group requires the suppliers and subcontractors to strictly obey legal requirements regulating their business activity and environment.

3.3 Relations between employee/company representatives and stakeholders

The NFM Group respects the privacy and personal choices made by their employees and company representatives. However, any potential influence on work and performance evaluation due to existing relationships should be assessed considering its impact on the company's interests and reputation. This applies to family or personal relationships between an employee/company representative and a client, supplier, subcontractor, or contractor. The NFM Group's policy towards personal relationships between an employee/company representative and a client, supplier, subcontractor, or contractor is very clear. While it's possible to have either personal or business relationships concurrently, the company prohibits the coexistence of both types of relationships between an employee/company representative and a client, supplier, subcontractor, or contractor. Any exceptions to this rule require consent from the CEO of the NFM Group.

3.4 Government contracts and other public procurement

The NFM Group is a fair competitor, a trustworthy and responsible business, and it thoroughly fulfils contracts by all contractual and legal obligations.

The NFM Group follows all guidelines regarding the procurement of goods and services in the countries where it operates its business. This includes provisions that prohibit any attempts to influence public officers.

3.5 Agents and Representatives

Agents and representatives of the NFM Group are required to follow the same guidelines of the Code of Conduct, as their actions may impact the interest and reputation of the company.

3.6 Refusal to work with unreliable partners

The NFM Group selects business partners based on objective criteria such as the quality and cost of their goods and services, and at the same time, seeks partners that have high standards of ethical business conduct.

The NFM Group exclusively collaborates with business partners whose reliability is unquestionable and refuses to work with entities using funds coming from illegal sources. All employees involved in processing payments should pay attention to potential irregularities or suspicious behaviour from contractors.

The NFM Group also declined entities not supporting environmental sustainability, not using resources and energy efficiently, not respecting labour code regulations in their countries, and employing children.

3.7 Prevention of corruption and bribery

The NFM Group conducts its business activities in accordance with international treaties and the legal provisions applicable in the countries where it operates. Many of these rules prevent the company, its employees, and third parties working for the company from engaging in bribery. This includes refraining from offering or promising bribes and allowing other entities to offer money or valuable items to any company stakeholders, to influence decisions or gain illegal or unethical business profits. NFM Group does not exchange illegal payments or bribes with any legal or natural persons. Awareness as to whether one deals with a state official or whether payment may be a legal remuneration and not a bribe is of fundamental importance for law abidance. In short, NFM Group does not accept the offering or taking of bribes.

The NFM Group conducts periodical training sessions concerning anti-corruption and anti-bribe matters, including FCPA regulations for all employees to whom it may concern, particularly the NFM sales force and company representatives.

3.8 Financial support for political, charity, and other institutions and organizations

The NFM Group avoids providing financial support to political, public, or other entities to prevent any association of the company's name with these institutions and organizations. Such associations could potentially harm the company's reputation if the supported organizations or institutions face a loss of credibility. The Management Board is the sole authority to consider any exceptions to the rule, and this is only permissible when the core values of a specific enterprise align with the values of the NFM Group.

3.9 Environmental Protection and Social Accountability.

The NFM Group designs production processes considering the minimum energy consumption, it eliminates dangerous products and prefers materials that may be subject to recycling and recirculation.

The NFM Group contributes to sustainability by assessing and reducing our environmental impact, prioritizing renewable energy, improving energy efficiency, managing waste responsibly, and aligning with international and local standards. The NFM Group will provide necessary environmental education and optimize travel for minimal impact through travel policies and guidelines. We are committed to continually enhancing the well-being of our employees and value chain partners, promoting ethical practices, and safeguarding human rights. Additionally, our dedication extends to optimizing product lifecycles, emphasizing longer lifespan, reuse, and recycling for a sustainable and responsible approach.

As an employee of the NFM Group, one is individually responsible for taking part and contributing to making sustainable choices and protecting the environment.

4 Personal standards and internal relations

When making personal decisions at work, we always consider the best interest of the entire group

The NFM Group respects the personal choices and behaviours of its employees and company representatives, recognizing that individual choices can have consequences for both the individual and the company's interests.

4.1 Principles of equal treatment

The NFM Group shall not engage in or support discrimination in hiring, remuneration, access to training, promotion, termination, or retirement based on race, national, territorial, social origin, caste, birth, religion, disability, gender, sexual orientation, family responsibilities, marital status, union membership, political opinions, age or any other condition that could give rise to discrimination. "

4.2 Promoting a Positive Workplace Environment

NFM Group is committed to providing a safe and respectful workplace for all employees. We emphasize open communication and encourage addressing concerns directly with the person involved. If issues arise, avoid discussing them with others; instead, share concerns with your direct manager. In the absence or ineligibility of the manager, contact the local HR department.

We value diversity and expect all employees and representatives to treat everyone with respect, withholding from negative comments or jokes based on personal characteristics. Embrace inclusivity to create an environment where everyone feels valued.

In times of conflict, focus on finding solutions rather than dwelling on the problem. Constructive conversations and a problem-solving mindset contribute to a healthier workplace culture. If you witness behaviour conflicting with our values, report it promptly to your direct manager or the local HR department. This ensures a swift and fair resolution, fostering a safe and supportive environment for everyone.

4.3 Conflict of Interests

The NFM Group requires all employees and company representatives, while using physical and intellectual resources of the company and making business decisions, to place the company's interests above any other interest. Any situations causing or potentially leading to a conflict between personal interests and company interests should be solved, eliminated, avoided, and disclosed. In addition, NFM Group prohibits the use of employee positions as well as company property, resources, or information for one's gain.

4.4 Confidentiality principle

NFM Group employees must keep all information about the company's business activities confidential and not share it with others. This applies to any business data and know-how which is not made public by the company. All employees are expected to behave with discretion and caution when communicating internal company affairs to the public.

4.5 Loyalty

All NFM Group employees and company representatives should bear in mind that their behaviour and statements about the company after working hours affect the company's image and reputation. For this reason, every employee and company representative should remain loyal to the company guided by the overriding principle of the NFM's good image among its business partners and in the local community. This rule applies not only to verbal statements but also to all activities on the internet and in social media.

4.6 Accepting invitations

NFM Group recommends caution when accepting invitations related to accommodation, travel, and business meetings. If you receive an invitation of this nature, please inform your immediate supervisor. Together, discuss whether it is appropriate to accept such an invitation. Company reputation shall always serve as the point of reference.

4.7 Code of conduct during business trips and meetings

When accepting an invitation described in item 4.6, an NFM Group employee must remember that in any situation taking place during a business trip as well as during work-related and business meetings, he or she represents the company and its interests. The NFM Group imposes on its employees and representatives personal liability for words spoken and behaviour displayed in every business situation, including in a situation outside working hours and involving the drinking of alcohol.

4.8 Offering and accepting gifts

The NFM Group's general policy provides for a high degree of caution as regards offering and accepting gifts that may have an impact on business decisions. The NFM Group allows offering and accepting promotional merchandise of insignificant value, carrying a logo of the company or a stakeholder. Gifts significantly departing from this standard should not be accepted, and should that happen, they should each time be transferred to NFM Group.

4.9 Relationships between employees, and between employees and company representatives

The NFM Group respects the privacy and choices made by their employees and company representatives. However, impact on work and work evaluation resulting from an existing relationship should be reported to one's superior. This especially applies to a relationship between a superior and a subordinate, as well as to family relations and personal relations between an employee/company representative and another employee involved in the same business process. Any current or previously existing relationship of this kind should be reported to the General Manager of the company, alternatively the CEO of NFM Group AS, and considered in terms of its impact on the interest and reputation of the company.

5 Awareness and consequences of violating the NFM Group Code of Conduct

The Code of Conduct cannot include every potentially occurring situation in which the company, an employee or a company representative may be involved. The NFM Group recommends being guided by common sense when evaluating a situation and using the standards described in this document you have any doubts, seek advice from your direct superior. Alternatively, you may seek guidance from the CEO of NFM Group or, if needed, the Chairman of the Board at NFM Group AS.

Every employee or representative of the company is responsible for ensuring the compliance of their behaviour and behaviour of their subordinates with the company's Code of Conduct. Any violation of the Code of Conduct provisions may lead to disciplinary proceedings including termination of an employment contract. Any violation of the Code of Conduct among individuals not working as company employees, but representing company interests before customers, suppliers or subcontractors may lead to undertaking legal actions.

Every employee of the NFM Group or company representative who suspects a violation of any provision of the Code of Conduct should immediately report it to his/her direct superior, or subsequently to the CEO in the NFM Group, alternatively the Chairman of the Board in NFM Group AS.
